

Two-year master's programme

Education: Educational Theory

Understanding the role of education in contemporary society

This master's programme is for students who are interested in better understanding the role of education in relation to the formation of individuals and society. The programme explores education through historical and contemporary perspectives.

The programme aims to provide you with in-depth knowledge of international educational theory as well as the opportunity to pursue a research career in the field. The programme's focus is to train your theoretical and analytical abilities. The coursework will help you to better understand and critically reflect upon education, regardless of your future role within the education system.

During the programme, you will study:

- the intellectual history of education and different educational practices;
- the boundaries between education, formation, upbringing, and fostering;
- the relationship between education and politics; and
- research methodology.

Your future career

After graduating, you will be prepared for doctoral studies, leading to careers within education or research. The degree will also qualify you for work in the education field, for national and international as well as public and private organisations.

Programme: master's level, two-year (120 credits)

Degree: Master's Degree in Education

Application for non-EU students: December 1- January 15

Application for national and EU students: March 15- April 15

Language: English

Read more:
edu.mah.se/LAPET